Gather, Keep, and Return: the Transformation of the University of the Philippines Center for Ethnomusicology

LAVERNE DAVID C. DE LA PEÑA (UPCE)

Established in 1997, the University of the Philippines (UP) Center for Ethnomusicology is a center for music research with material collections on the music cultures in the Philippines, Southeast Asia and other continents. Its core holding comprised recordings, field notes, video, film, photographs and musical instruments put together by Dr. Maceda and his associates since 1953. Recognizing the precious value of these archival materials, UNESCO inscribed it in its Memory of the World Register in the year 2007. The presentation discusses the new endeavor towards community engagement and empowerment that the leadership of the center has decided to pursue as illustrated in two projects: an ongoing music repatriation initiative and the establishment of community-based archives

Round Table Discussion

The talk will be followed by a round table discussion with Sonic Entanglements and Decolonizing Southeast Asian Sound Archives (DeCoSEAS) partners on decolonization, repatriation, and sound archives in Southeast Asia. The discussion will take as its starting points the theoretical engagement and the archival intervention of the Sonic Entanglements project.
